A feedlot full of foot rot?

(Go to the treatment of choice)

The treatment of choice for infectious pododermatitis is Liquamycin Injectable. It is specific against Spherophorus necrophorus, the organism most frequently isolated. And its breadth of spectrum handles the numerous complicating bacteria, too.

In clinical trials with infected animals, 93% recovered after treatment with Liquamycin Injectable—many in just one or two days.

Liquamycin Injectable comes preconstituted, ready-to-use. It may be administered with most parenteral fluids, by any parenteral route. Produces high concentrations of oxytetracycline in the blood serum rapidly, and maintains detectable blood levels for 48 hours. Needs no refrigeration.

Liquamycin is indicated for a wide variety of livestock infections. Where follow-up therapy with oxytetracycline is indicated, recommend Terramix® ABD-25 for feed medication . . . or Cosa-Terramycin® Fortified Soluble Powder for water medication.
